Night Scenes in a Gin Mill-"Let Him Have It! That is the Way We Do It in This Country."
On the night of the 16th of December a number of patrons of the bottle met in the saloon of Silas Olmstead, corner of Spring and Washington streets. and divided the time between the discussion of political and social questions and gin drinking. The discussions waxed warm and eventuated in a hot discussion between one James Lawler and John J. Darrington, of 94 Chariton street. They finally came to blows and had a rough and tumble fight on the floor, in the presence of the inmates and John Mulkins, of No. 55 Vandam street, and the barkeeper, John McDonald. Some of the spectators attempted to pull Lawier, who was brutany kicking Darrington, off him, when one of the sentidrinken crowd yelled, "Let him have it! That's the way we do it in this country." The hint was enough, and the light progressed without interruption until Darrington was laid out and completely exhausted, when the brute Lawler discontinued the use of his fists and heel taps. Darrington was conveyed to his residence, and from thence taken to Believue Hospital, and Lawler was arrested by the police. The accused, Coroner Young learns, was let out on $1,000 ball by Judge Cox, of Jefferson Market, his mother becoming his security, and he has since disappeared.

About eight o'clock on Sunday evening a messenger from the hospital summoned Coroner Young to Bellevue Hospital to take the statement of Darrington, who was in the last stages of dissolution; but before he arrived the man died.

These are all the details that have reached the Coroner, who will hold an inquest to-day or to-morrow. The police have so far been unable to lears the whereabouts of Lawler, who, the Coroner has been informed, has put a long distance between him and the scene of his brutality.

WONDERFUL EXHIBITION OF COWARDICE. and John Mulkins, of No. 55 Vandam street, and

WONDERFUL EXHIBITION OF COWARDICE. NEW YORK, Jan. 4, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-I was a witness to a remarkable exhibition of cowardice in a University place car, this (Satur-day) afternoon, at about five o'clock. As the car passed Bleecker street without stopping, a woman, dressed in mourning and bareheaded, jumped or flung herself on to the car in great fright, and stated that a man who was following her had drawn a pistol on her twice and was trying to kill following the car. The woman took a seat between an old gentleman and lady. Immediately tween an old gentleman and lady. Immediately several cowardly gentlemen () demanded of the conductor to put the woman off the car, fearing that the rufilan outside might fire into the car! The cowardly conductor said he would do so if it was the wish of the passengers, and he immediately so decided, and peremptorily ordered, the woman off. She, with tears and sobs and in great fright, implored the conductor not to put her off the car as she had no friends and the rufilan outside would kill her, he having twice drawn a pistol on her! None of the gentlemen() spoke in the woman's defence or favor, several continued to demand her expulsion and the cowardly conductor pulled the bell and ordered the woman to get off; then an old gentleman spoke up and said she snould stay and should not be put off, and if was decided to let her remain until a policeman could be iound. The car proceeded along to Clinton place, then to University place, to Thirteenth street, the rufflan dollowing the car all the way. At Thirteenth street and University place a policeman was found, when the woman was placed in his charge. Was not this a magnificent specimen of cowardly meanness? A carload of men afraid of one rufflan—afraid to protect a poor, friendless woman in danger of her hie; so that the rufflan might have a better chance to murser her, so that they might enjoy their ride in safety and save five cents! Please request the carcompany to get a more courageous conductor and one who understands his duty better—one who will protect an unprotected woman even against a carload of male cowards or a side waik rufflan.
